

FINAL SESSION OF CONFERENCE

Reports of Several Boards and Committees Received and Adopted.

LIST OF APPOINTMENTS

Assignments Please Ministers, and Body Adjourns in Good Humor.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Winston-Salem, N. C., November 21.—Previous to the reading of the appointments the board of domestic missions Conference was busy to-day with the adoption of the reports of boards and committees.

The board of missions recommended an assessment of $21,000 on the conference the coming year for foreign missions, and $1,000 for domestic missions. The report recommended the election of H. K. Boyer, missionary secretary of the conference; J. H. West, president of the board of missions; C. H. Ireland, vice-president, and C. A. Wood, secretary and treasurer.

After this report had been read, C. H. West submitted a resolution recommending that the conference petition the different boards of the church not to increase the assessments upon this conference for the year 1912. He said, in speaking to the resolution, that the financial ability of churches could reach the limit, and that he felt the limit had been about reached in this conference. He said there were a number of officers of the church over in Nashville sitting in their offices indulging in large visions, and that knowing the preachers and laymen in the church to be loyal, they felt all they had to do was increase the assessments and the loyal preachers and laymen would "come across" with the money.

Some churches, he said, refrained from increasing the salaries of their pastors, because of the fact that they know that when they do so the assessments for other causes will be increased. J. A. Baldwin opposed the resolution, saying he felt the conference should not take action, which looked like effort to circumscribe the work of the church.

The committee on temperance submitted strong resolutions, which were adopted, urging the enforcement of Statewide prohibition laws, the prohibition of the sale of near-beer, cocaine, morphine and similar drugs, the prohibition of interstate shipment of intoxicants into prohibition States.

The report also indorsed the recommendation of the general conference of this year in recommending preachers to abstain from the use of tobacco. Bishop Hendrix said he used tobacco when a young man, but never after he entered the ministry, and that he had felt always that he could not afford to indulge in anything that might be offensive to others.

The indications now are that the appointments announced to-day as a whole, have given more satisfaction than any that have been read to this conference in a number of years. No complaint was heard among the preachers after the reading, and the conference adjourned in a most satisfactory manner.

List of Appointments.

The Western North Carolina Conference adjourned to-day at noon. Bishop Hendrix pronounced the benediction at the close of the reading of the appointments:

conscience, hence let us encourage nature study in the schools and create interest in our bird friends and neighbors.

It was gratifying to Mr. Chapman to have present in his audience a large number of teachers from this city and from Petersburg. The lecture to-morrow evening will be upon "Bird Migration," particularly as it is illustrated by the pelicans of America. The lecture is illustrated by the use of the most beautiful bird pictures in existence. All bird lovers are cordially invited to be present.

Lecture on Steam Turbines.
J. A. Sherry, of the General Electric Company, is to deliver the illustrated lecture on "Steam Turbines" at Eagles' Hall, corner Fourth and Broad streets, to-day, instead of Dechert Berg, as published some time ago in local papers.

This lecture is given under the auspices of the Richmond, N. C. Chapter, N. E. A. and will be free to the engineering public. All who are interested in steam engineering are invited to attend.

Address on Sanitation.
The Stonehill Jackson School Mothers' Club will meet this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the kindergarten building. The address will be addressed by Dr. E. C. Levy on subject of "Sanitation."

OBITUARY

Funeral of Mrs. Stewart.
The funeral of Mrs. John Stewart, of Brook Hill, will take place from Emmanuel Episcopal Church, in Henric street, at 10 o'clock, to-morrow, at 3:30 o'clock. The Rev. John Moncreuf, D. D., and the Rev. E. E. Osgood, rector of Emmanuel Church, will officiate.

The Virginia Historical Society will be closed during the funeral hour, Mrs. Stewart being the only woman who was an honorary member and one of its chief benefactors.

In the passing into the higher life of Mrs. John Stewart, of Brook Hill, Richmond and Virginia have lost one who most nobly typified all that we have and reverence in the lady of the old regime.

She was born nearly eighty-nine years ago, and most of her long and beautiful life was spent in her beloved home, Brook Hill. She was the only daughter of Mr. Robert Williamson and his wife, Lucy Parke Chamberlayne. Her mother died when she was a few days old, and she was brought up under the care of her aunt, Mrs. William Byrd Chamberlayne. On her mother's side she was descended from William Byrd, Westover, and the descendant of the founder of Richmond, was essentially a part of old Richmond, as her descendants are leading on to the life of the Richmond of to-day.

In her girlhood Mrs. Stewart was famed for her beauty, and she retained this great gift to the end, being of such distinguished appearance as to be easily first in any company. At twenty she married Mr. John Stewart of Roanoke, Scotland, but at that time a resident of Richmond. He bought her father's estate of Brook Hill, and she lived there for many years, which has been unequalled even in Virginia, for its hospitality.

To this home have come through the years the most distinguished men who have made the history and literature of our State and country, and many distinguished visitors from across the seas. No class, however, were so heartily welcomed as those who were the ministers of Christ's gospel, from the most learned bishop to the humblest curate. Although there was everything to impress most happily these many visitors, the crowning fact was that Mrs. Stewart was personally. With the beauty and dignity of a queen, but with the graciousness and sympathy of a true woman, she received and entertained her guests, and traveled much in her younger days, and at a time when travel was more unusual than now. Her memory was very remarkable, and her information so broad that her conversation charmed all her hearers. But while her beauty and intellect were very unusual, it was her unflinching sympathy for all in joy or sorrow, and above all, the brightness of her living faith, which chiefly distinguished her. Her life for many years has been shut in, but to her presence came hundreds to confide in her, to be comforted by her sympathy, to be cheered by her smile, to be refreshed by her never-failing fund of interesting stories, and to be inspired by listening to one who daily "walked with God." Thus her influence radiated far, and far, too, will radiate the sorrow in her going, the precious stone to review the character and life of this remarkable woman. At every turn of her life she shone, and her own beautiful light and color, and the chastening of long years, like the cutting of the jewel, but adds to its

SLAUGHTER OF BIRDS DUE TO SOCIETY WOMAN'S VANITY

The first lecture in the thirtieth series of lectures on the Thomas foundation was given before a large audience in the chapel of the Richmond College last night, by Frank M. Chapman, curator of ornithology and mammalogy in the American Museum of Natural History. In this lecture he dealt with the relation of birds to man, both in regard to their economic and esthetic value. The author stated positively that no single species of bird has been found harmful to man in the bird's natural habitat. In ignorance laws have been made against certain, as the chicken-hawk, whose destruction would be a dire calamity. The birds devour not only insects, but the seeds of weeds; they kill mice and rats as well as snakes. It was stated that the analysis of the contents of the stomach of a single chickadee, showed the presence of 1,928 eggs of the canker worm. Sparrows eat great quantities of weed seed. One stomach analysis contained 1,000 seeds of the pig weed. Chapman said that the sparrow-devour 875 tons of weed seed in their yearly visit to Iowa alone. Thus they aid the farmer and indirectly all men, but the city dweller is directly benefited, as they devour mosquitoes.

Very early in the history of the race birds were used as food. Among the earliest English laws are game laws for the protection of the sport of the huntsman. And the sportsman have done a great deal for the protection of birds in making laws for the protection of the birds, establishing game wardens and in general maintaining the supply of game.

Had the agriculturist realized the value of the non-game birds equally as well, they, too, would have had far better protection. The lecturer stated that there are the astonishing number of 500 varieties of insects which prey upon the oak alone, from which they derive food. The oak attracts the birds, which eat up great numbers of insects at the same time. City trees are not as healthy as forest trees, because they are not so densely populated with birds.

The poets have realized the true worth of the birds, as poets have ever loved the world's thought, so Coleridge has named the albatross known as no number of naturalists could have done. Americans have come to love the nightingale and the skylark, largely through the poet's singing. Our American poets have been great bird lovers. Longfellow is at the head of all of the bird poets.

Early in the history of the race, birds were used for adornment. Chiefs of tribes used eagle feathers in their hair to indicate prowess. The use of birds' plumage by women dates from the reign of Elizabeth. Since that time their use by women has steadily increased, regardless of the destruction which is wrought. Laws are made to prevent their wanton destruction to no effect. Audubon societies do but little. So long as vanity is appeased, the slaughter will apparently go on to the extermination of the prized species.

The lecturer knew a hunter in Key West who boasted of having killed 130,000 birds. A hunter in North Carolina had 30,000 birdskins in his possession. The statistics in regard to the slaughter of birds are very hard to get, yet it is known, for instance, that one shipment from Archangel Island contained 100,000 pairs of wings of the barnswallow. Venezuela exports 538,000 egret plumes in a single year. But this takes no account of those which were wounded and died later, or of the young which miserably perished, for the birds are usually killed at the nesting time. So long as women create the demand, men will not find who will fulfill their merciless demand. Unlike the sportsman who protects the birds, the women have not made a single move to protect the birds which serve as their adornment.

The lecturer enumerated some things which can be done to protect the birds. It is known that all birds should receive the same protection as game birds. Birds should be kept off from the market entirely. This will do away with the pot-hunter. Unlicensed cats should be killed, as they are great bird destroyers. Shrubs yielding fruit for the food and breeding places of the birds should be cultivated. In times of great storm many birds die of starvation in a few hours. Food then will tide the birds over. Finally, remember that fashion is a stronger god than
